ZIKA COULD AFFECT 4M

1 The Zika virus — linked to severe birth defects in thousands of babies in Brazil — is spreading "explosively" and could affect as many as 4 million people in the Americas, the World Health Organization said. 5 A man carrying two handguns and a copy of the Quran was arrested at the Disneyland Paris amusement park outside Paris on Thursday, French officials said. France remains in a state of emergency after Islamist gunmen and suicide bombers killed 130 people in a series of jihadist attacks in and around Paris in November last year. A police source said the 28-year-old man of European origin arrested at Disneyland had been carrying the guns, one of them an automatic handgun, concealed in a bag with the religious text. REUTERS

Former Providence mayor Cianci dies

Vincent "Buddy" Cianci led the city of Providence for a total of 22 years. He died Thursday at age 74.

Vincent "Buddy" Cianci, whose two stints as mayor of Providence, Rhode Island, each ended abruptly due to felony convictions, died on Thursday at age 74 after a brief hospitalization.

Cianci, the longest serving mayor of Rhode Island's capital city, ran Providence for 22 years in all, from 1975 to 1984 and again from 1991 to 2002.

He attempted another comeback in 2014, unsuccessfully running as an independent for mayor seven years after he completed a four-and-a-half-year prison term for racketeering.

Despite his convictions, Cianci remained popular with many residents. Supporters credited him with improving an economically depressed, once mob-dominated city during his six terms.

The prospect in 2014 of another Cianci administration, however, was so abhorrent to the political establishment that even the Republican mayoral candidate donated money to his Democratic opponent and ended up voting for him against Cianci.

In 1984, Cianci was forced to resign after pleading no contest to assaulting a man he accused of having a relationship with his estranged wife.

A look at his legacy

Cianci ran Providence for 22 years in all, from 1975 to 1984 and again from 1991 to 2002.

He attempted another comeback in 2014, seven years after serving four-and-a-half years in prison for racketeering.

In 2001, federal authorities charged Cianci with corruption in an investigation dubbed "Operation Plunder Dome." Cianci, who maintained his innocence, was accused of overseeing a City Hall in which officials solicited bribes and engaged in extortion.

His political saga made him a national figure. Journalist Mike Stanton chronicled the story in the book "The Prince of Providence."

Cianci eventually wrote an autobiography, "Politics and Pasta: How I Prosecuted Mobsters, Rebuilt a Dying City, Advised a President, Dined with Sinatra, Spent Five Years in a Federally Funded Gated Community, and Lived to Tell the Tale." He also started his own line of pasta sauce.

Elorza, the mayor of Providence who defeated Cianci in 2014, ordered flags to fly at half-staff.

"Mayor Cianci's love for the City of Providence is undeniable and his mark on the city will not be forgotten," he said in a statement.

Lt. Gov. Dan McKee praised Cianci for overseeing Providence's renaissance, while Rhode Island House Speaker Nicholas Mattiello called him a "giant on the Rhode Island political landscape."

Cianci hosted a talk show on radio station WPRO in Rhode Island, which reported his death on air on Thursday morning. Cianci was taken to a hospital on Wednesday night after falling ill while filming his weekly television show, "On the Record with Buddy Cianci," for ABC6 in Providence, the station said on its website.

Cianci had battled cancer prior to the 2014 election. REUTERS

The former Mayor of Providence, Rhode Island, Vincent A. "Buddy" Cianci Jr., who went to jail in 2002 after being convicted of racketeering conspiracy, had a tradition of taking part in the Bristol, Rhode Island, July Fourth parade. Two men were arrested in connection to a home invasion gone violently wrong in Brookline on Wednesday.

Antonio Brown Jr., 27, of Cambridge and Khari Wilcox, 18, of Dorchester were charged with armed home invasion, armed assault in a dwelling, attempted robbery, attempted murder and possession of an illegal firearm, according to Brookline Police Chief Daniel O'Leary.

The two were arrested in their hospital rooms, where they were being treated for stab wounds and a gunshot wound.

O'Leary said that four men broke into an apartment at 198 St. Paul Street late Wednesday morning to rob a targeted occupant. He said that drugs may be a factor.

The occupant fought off the attackers, stabbing both Brown and Wilcox, and shooting one of them. The occupant suffered several gunshot wounds to the leg, O'Leary said, though it isn't clear who shot him. All three men were in stable condition.

The four men fled the scene in a rental car that was stolen from Cambridge. The two injured men bailed out at 75 Harvard Street. Boston police found the stolen car near Symphony Hall on St. Botolph Street.

The two uninjured men are still on the run.

The incident prompted three Brookline schools to go on lockdown for several hours.

Senate passes climate change package
Massachusetts would be required to develop a climate-change mitigation plan and meet new carbon-emission reduction benchmarks under legislation passed unanimously by the Senate on Thursday.

Senate President Pro Tem Marc Pacheco, who sponsored the legislation, praised the bipartisan collaboration of Senate Minority Leader Bruce Tarr, contrasting that with the partisan divisiveness that accompanies political discussion of climate change on a national level.

Tarr said he is "very supportive" of the bill and sponsored a provision adopted by the Senate that would require the transportation secretary to study the feasibility of adding electric vehicle charging stations along the Turnpike.

The Senate voted 37-0 in favor of the legislation. METRO

WATER BOTTLE DONATIONS WILL NOT SAVE FLINT

ERNEST OWENS
The Ernest Opinion

GETTY IMAGES

Recent celebrity and charity donations of water to help address the crisis in Flint, Michigan, aren't sufficient.

By now, you've probably read stories of celebrities and local heroes donating thousands of bottles of clean water to the residents of Flint.

This comes after the national uproar over the city's roughly 100,000 residents being exposed to lead-contaminated drinking water that has disproportionately infected small children, elders and poor communities.

So as a short-term solution, celebrities such as Cher, Pearl Jam, Puff Daddy, Meek Mill and Mark Wahlberg have donated excessive amounts of bottled water.

Small nonprofit coalitions from Philadelphia to Chicago have also chimed in on the efforts and have gotten great press and social media buzz.

If only it were that simple.

Mathematically speaking, Americans use an average of 50 gallons of water a day for standard household living, according to the Environmental Protection Agency.

That would equal about 200 bottles of water per person daily (yes, we use that much water to wash dishes, our bodies, clothes, food and more).

With about 102,000 Flint residents, donating 100,000 bottles (which many celebrities have been doing) would give one resident only enough water to wash his or her face once.

In other words, donating water is a small ripple in a huge sea of problems that begs for our attention and activism.

The first question we should all be asking ourselves is: How in the hell could something like this happen in America? Then we should start focusing on whom should be held accountable.

It's no surprise that this would have us looking at the governor's mansion. Republican Gov. Rick Snyder has allowed this human rights crisis to go on for two years without taking any executive action.

A national call for his resignation should be pushed for immediately, and those more concerned about the water rather than the politics behind it should reprioritize.

Water-bottle donation is the low-hanging fruit of a larger issue. This isn't temporary devastation caused by a natural disaster — it's the result of gross negligence by public servants.

Most Americans are treating this issue almost as if Flint were a Third World country, far away from us. "Pray for Flint," someone on my Facebook timeline wrote. "Those poor people must be devastated."

Those "poor people" are fellow Americans who are experiencing something that could happen to any of our communities — especially nonaffluent urban communities.

Let's stop subscribing to the pathetic humanitarian/savior belief that positions us above those less fortunate than us.

We are Flint. Flint is a part of our society. Simply donating water bottles and praying is pandering at the most basic level.

We are capable of raising awareness to a higher degree than simply making this a quantifying measure of service.

Stop wasting plastic bottles and start investing your time in getting restorative justice for Flint residents.

"The first question we should all be asking ourselves is how in the hell could something like this happen in America. Then we should start focusing on those who should be held accountable."

In "Fifty Shades of Black," Marlon Wayans sends up "Fifty Shades of Grey," but also finds time to skewer "Magic Mike." OPEN ROAD FILMS

Marlon Wayans doesn't hate 'Fifty Shades'

The star and co-writer of "Fifty Shades of Black" thinks you have to sort of love something to make fun of it.

MATT PRIGGE
matt.prigge@metro.us

Marlon Wayans jokes about the reason he's always working. "My little one — this little spoiled brat — I take him to Nashville. I ask him where he wants to eat. He says, 'Let's go to Mastro's,'" he tells us, referring to the high-end eatery. "If he ever complains, 'Dad, why were you always on the road?' 'Because I had to f—ing pay for Mastro's, you little bastard!'"

Right now, the actor and performer, 43, has "Fifty Shades of Black," a send-up of the "Fifty Shades of Grey" movie. But Wayans, who co-wrote and plays the mysterious Christian Grey analog, swears it's not really a "spoof" — or at least that's not how he and his collaborators approached it.

GETTY IMAGES

I have to confess I don't hate the movie "Fifty Shades of Grey."

I don't hate it. I love-hate it. I think you have to love-hate the movie in order to make fun of it. You have to love and respect what's good about it, and you have to hate what's bad about it. You have to find out what's funny about it, and then deliver it. So I didn't hate it. It looked great. I thought some of the flirting was cute. I didn't like the sex scenes. They were pretty boring.

They're very PG-13.

They're PG. It's like a G. I could see "Kung Fu Panda" doing some of the stuff in that movie. I can see Fiona and Shrek doing something like that. [Laughs] "Come to the red room. I'll get the big whip. I'll use my tail!" "Fifty Shades of Green."

You had to watch the film a lot to make this. I imagine that's like Stockholm syndrome.

It becomes your favorite movie. You watch it over and over and over again, until you throw up in your mouth slightly. When someone mentions the movie you go [gags]. You ever have cake and it's delicious, but you get greedy and have five, six, seven slices? You start hating yourself. And then someone says, "You want some cake?" And the thought of cake makes you almost vomit in your mouth. That's what happens with these [spoof] movies.

Do you think you're even simply making fun of it?

It's not making fun of it. It's a comedic retelling. Honestly if you've never seen "Fifty Shades of Grey" you would still enjoy this movie, because of the characters and the situations. You make these movies like they're original, and you have to make the journey enjoyable whether people have seen them or not. You're doing a comedy. At the end of the day we approached it like a comedy. Not a spoof; a comedy.

...but seriously

Do you see yourself doing drama again, as you did with "Requiem for a Dream"?

I would love to, but you know, there's a line of guys to get those movies before they get to me. When I think something's good or something's for me, I'm fearless about going out and trying to get it. Sometimes you win, sometimes you lose. In the meantime I do comedy. I want to make people laugh or make people cry laughing. Drama, I have that skill set, I've studied Shakespeare. But it's low-hanging fruit. You do what you can do and what I feel I'm purposed to do, which is to make people laugh.

3 Dating apps if you're over Tinder

LAURIE DAVIS

Single and Swiping

Laurie Davis is the founder of eFlirt, an online dating concierge service, and the best-selling author of "Love @ First Click: The Ultimate Guide to Online Dating."

There's a dating app out there for you. ISTOCK

No app is perfect. As a digital dating expert, I hear all the gripes. "My matches on Tinder are lame," one client told me. Another said, "I match with a lot of people, but no one writes me back."

If you're stuck on swiping, it could be that the app you're using isn't your perfect match. Here are the three biggest complaints I hear, and three expert-approved apps to quiet your grumblings.

Problem: You're getting a million messages, but they're not from the right matches, and the ones you do like never respond or meet up.
Solution: Bumble puts women in control — they make the first move. Because of this, the quality of matches and conversation on Bumble is much higher than the average app. My female clients love that they're not bombarded with cheesy pickup lines, while my male clients appreciate that they don't have to come up with a witty opener. This app also wins the unofficial award for hottest guys — at least as far as today's swipes go.

Problem: You're going on dates, but they're all lame.
Solution: Coffee Meets Bagel lets you filter matches by your deal breakers, like height and religion, so the quality of potential dates is instantly higher. It also helps you avoid decision overload by giving you only one match each day. You can pay for a few more if you want, but you won't be swiping endlessly.

Problem: You dream of meeting someone through friends, like in your favorite rom-com.
Solution: Hinge feels like one big cocktail party because it only matches you with friends of friends. There's more social accountability because you and your match have someone in common and could get the inside scoop on the other if needed. Also, matches are timed. You have 14 days to get offline for a date, meaning you can't endlessly message each other on the app without meeting.

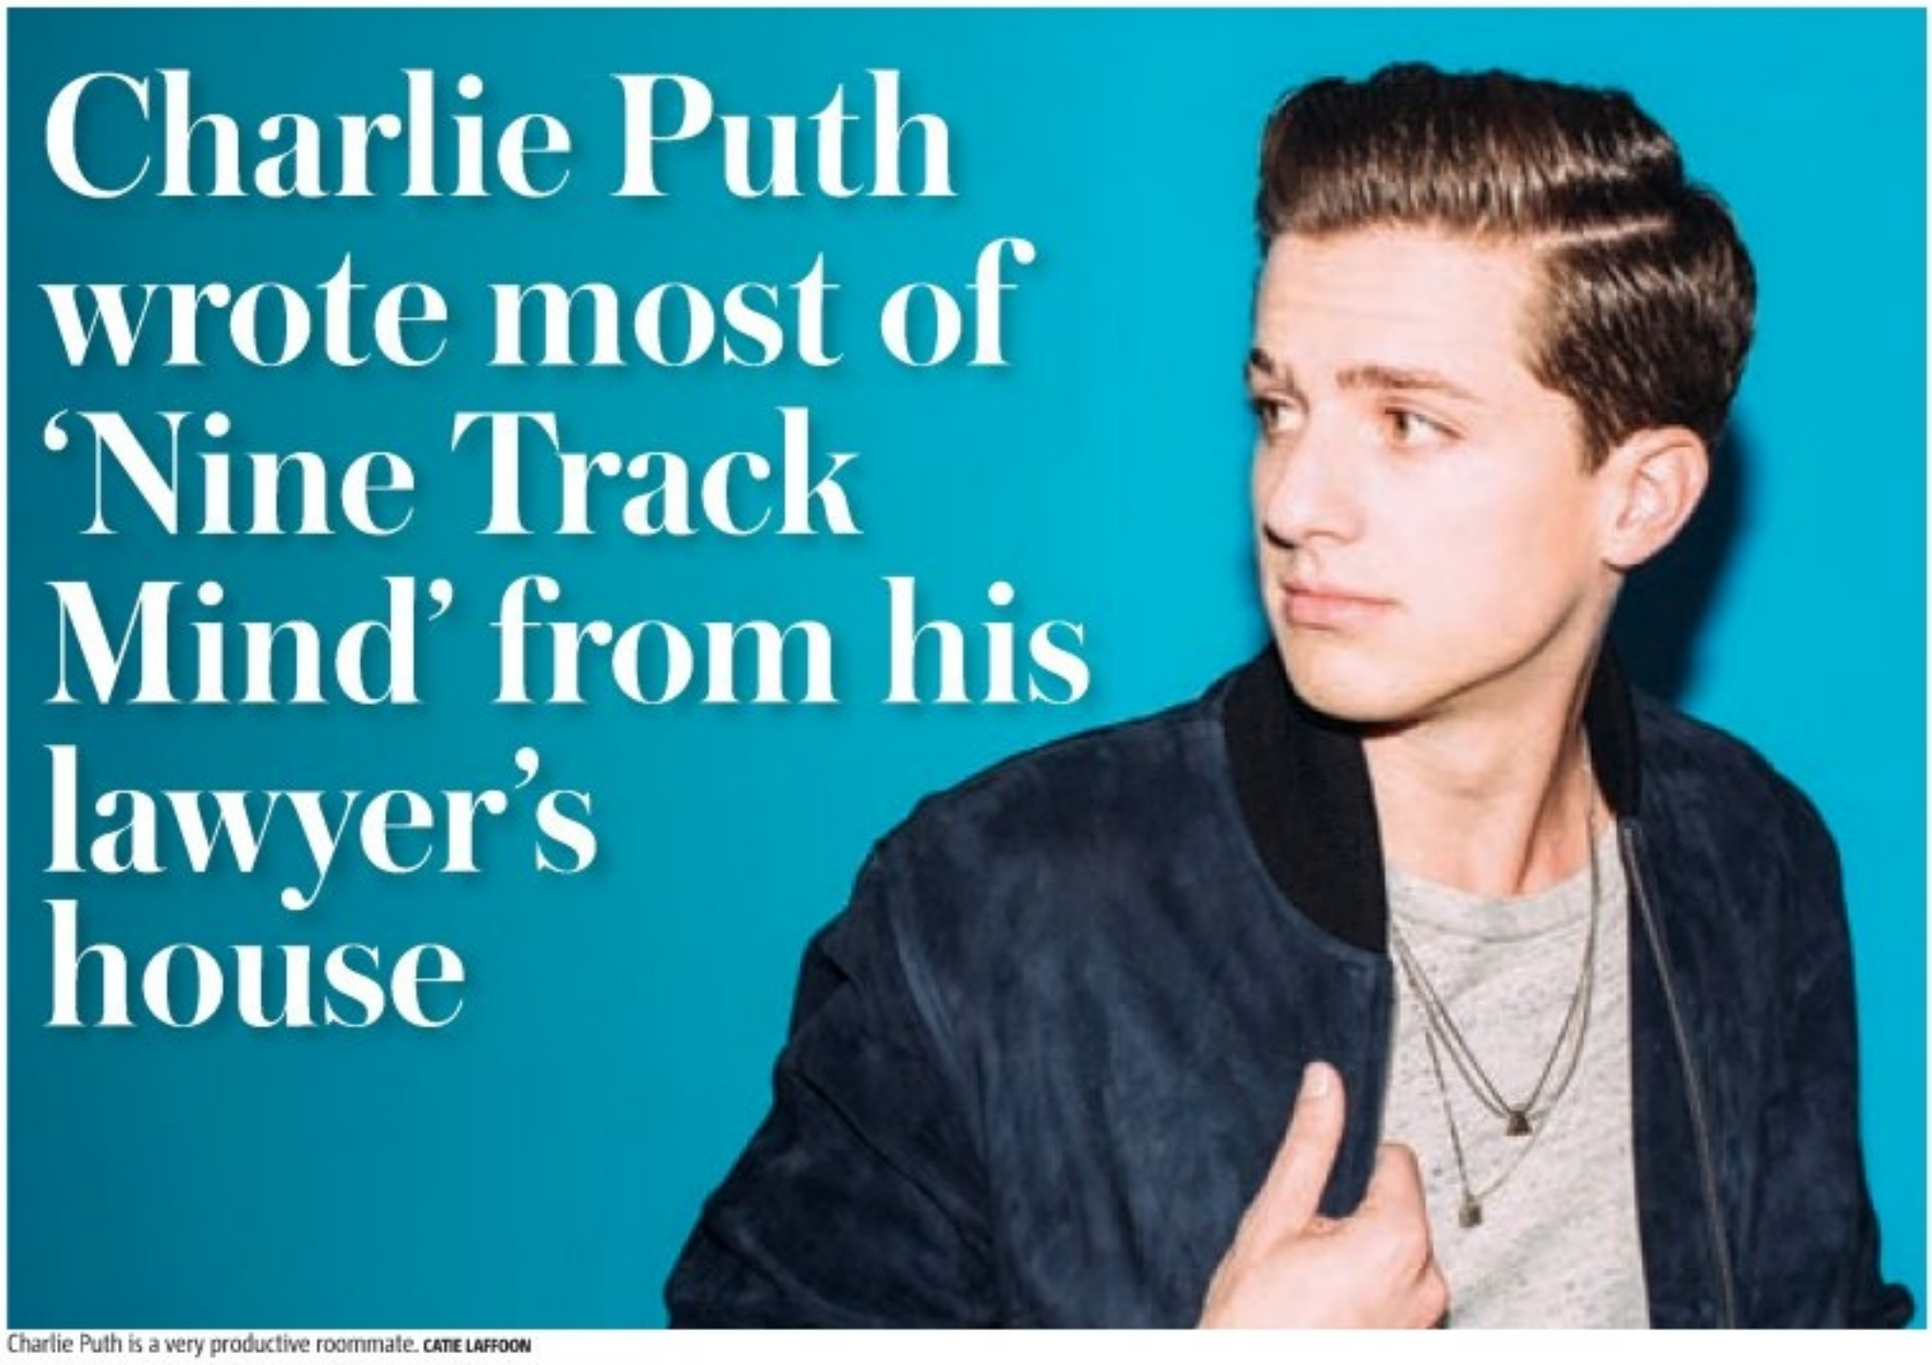
Charlie Puth wrote most of 'Nine Track Mind' from his lawyer's house



Charlie Puth is a very productive roommate. CATIE LAFFOON

And that's nothing compared to what he and Selena Gomez did in the closet.

RACHEL RACZKA
@rachelraczka
rachel.raczka@metro.us

Charlie Puth knows exactly what he'd like to wear to this year's Grammy Awards. The 24-year-old singer-songwriter is up for three awards for his "Fast & Furious 7" single, "See You Again" with Wiz Khalifa, and he'd love to wear a dark green Saint Laurent suit. But don't ask him what he plans to say if he wins.

"I don't want to jinx it," he says. "I just have a couple bullet points. I'll thank Wiz, first and foremost, and I'll thank Paul [Walker] and Vin Diesel for including me in the film, and my mom."

Puth's Meghan Trainor duet "Marvin Gaye" — a cleverly coquettish hook that uses the soul singer's name as a verb — and subsequent follow-ups ("One Call Away," "Nothing But Trouble" with Lil Wayne) teased what type of album might be expected from the Berklee grad, but it was not until today that we knew for sure. We caught up with Puth from Washington, D.C., where he's on a rigorous promo schedule ahead of the release of his long-awaited studio debut, "Nine Track Mind," from Atlantic.

Where were you when you found out about the Grammy nominations?
I was coming back from London, in the air with no Wi-Fi, and then immediately got a sea of texts. Like 600 of them, saying congratulations. It was totally surreal.

I've read that you're a self-proclaimed "music nerd," but what do you really like to geek out to?
I love pretty much everything, but I like to break down the production in music. I like to listen really closely to try to figure out what type of reverb is on John Mayer's "Clarity," or I like to breakdown the chord structures of songs.

Where did you write this album?
This is going to sound really strange, but I spent most of the time writing in my lawyer's house. I had to move out of my apartment because I simply didn't want to live there anymore, and my lawyer and I are really good friends and it's convenient that he's also an awesome attorney. I had a writing session in an AirBnB and it was on a cliff, and I just didn't like the vibe. I got freaked out. So I went to his house and had a writing session and didn't leave for like six months. I did the whole album there.

You're like the roommate that never leaves.
I literally had Selena Gomez come over and record in one of the closets because we didn't have a vocal booth set up.

How were the acoustics?
It was good. We just had to put in a lot sweaters to diminish the reverb.

How did "We Don't Talk Anymore" come to be?
I met Selena at an after party after the MTV Video Music Awards and we were talking about something and in the back of my head, I was thinking, 'I'd like to do a song with her some day.' She has a really cool voice and I think our voices complement each other really well. I didn't think this was going to be the song for her or for me.

As for lyrical sentiment, I think it fits so well for her to be on [the song] because everyone knows what she went through. And I think everyone has had those relationships where you're obsessed with that one person, but then you break it off peacefully, but it's changed. You can't talk to them like friends anymore. You can say you want to remain friends, but it's easier said than done. It's heartbreaking. "We Don't Talk Anymore" is basically the conversation a month after that type of breakup.

NFL INVESTIGATION OF PEYTON SHOULD BE HELD AFTER SB 50

Peyton Manning is alleged to have had HGH shipped to his house. GETTY IMAGES

Wait until after the Super Bowl.

That's my message to the National Football League, following reports this week that it's conducting a "comprehensive" investigation of Peyton Manning regarding an Al Jazeera report that linked the Denver Broncos' quarterback to HGH in 2011, while he was recovering from neck surgery.

The Broncos defeated the New England Patriots in the AFC Championship last weekend. They will play the Carolina Panthers in Super Bowl 50, one week from Sunday. Per usual, that leaves us with plenty of time to discuss things that don't necessarily have to do with the actual game on Feb. 7. And regardless of how you feel about Manning, the Broncos or HGH use in general, the accusations that may or may not have been made against him in that Al Jazeera report won't have any effect on who will be hoisting the Lombardi Trophy.

I know what you're thinking: "But what if Manning used HGH this year to return from a late-season injury?" Well, first and foremost, the NFL now tests for HGH. They didn't in 2011, when Manning is accused of having it sent to his home under his wife's name. So it would be a pretty ballsy move to take a little HGH for the playoffs. Also, I'm no doctor, but I'm willing to bet an HGH regimen is more complicated than that.

Regardless, if the Broncos do somehow defeat the Panthers and win the Super Bowl, it will mainly be because their defense held Cam Newton in check. There are plenty of storylines to go around as we get ready for the last game of the year, on the grandest stage of them all. And the football fan in me would like the NFL to hold off on any such investigation until after the Super Bowl.

Right now, you're probably also thinking, "Wait a minute. Who is writing this? Danny, is this you?"

Yes, it's me. Listen, I still want the NFL to investigate Manning's alleged ties to HGH. And I still want the national media to take this story seriously. I said just as much about a month ago when the Al Jazeera report first came out. But now that we're a week away from the big game, I don't want to have to deal with off-the-field quarterback "scandals" leading into the second straight Super Bowl.

We already had an NFL investigation steal the spotlight away from last year's Super Bowl, as "Deflategate" took on a life of its own leading up to the game. I think I can speak for all of New England when I say I could have done without all of that nonsense.

Since the Al Jazeera report first broke, I've been adamant that this is a major story, and it shouldn't be ignored. I've said this because of the precedent the national media set with its reaction to Deflategate. I've also said that if the NFL is ready to take this to the next level with an actual investigation, then by all means, have at it. It's a precedent the league set, by comparing PSI to PEDs during Deflategate. But I don't need it all right this moment.

The Patriots fan in me wants revenge. I want every star player to be treated the same way. I want an investigation and the media scrutiny that goes along with it, more than anyone else. The football fan in me wants the Manning investigation to be a top headline, but not something that steals the spotlight away from the game itself. I don't want to go through that again, with any player.

Right now, this is the football fan speaking. And I want the NFL to wait until after the Super Bowl.

Calvin Johnson and Alshon Jeffery will be available, but will the Pats be ready to pay?

MATT BURKE

Landing a wide receiver like Calvin Johnson would cost the Patriots a pretty penny. GETTY IMAGES

Ever since Randy Moss and Bill O'Brien had their little blowout, which basically ended Moss' stint in New England, the Patriots have been in need of an "X receiver."

They've more than gotten by without one, winning a Super Bowl and getting to another one since Moss left town.

But, ya know, it'd be nice.

The chances that the Pats would land a top-shelf wide receiver this offseason are again slim as the two big names that will be discussed in the coming weeks (the Bears' Alshon Jeffery and the Lions' Calvin Johnson) both have enormous price tags attached to them. Oh, and it seems as though Bill Belichick thinks that the "deep-threat receiver" is just about as important as the running back position these days (i.e., they really don't matter in today's NFL — or at least in the Patriots' current offense).

Patriots fans hoping to see either Jeffery or Johnson land in Foxboro need to simply hope that Belichick does a complete 180 on the subject. And believe it or not, there's a chance of that happening. Belichick is constantly trying to "change with the times." What was in two years ago in the NFL is passe now.

We saw Belichick try to emulate the Peyton Manning Colts in the late 2000s when Tom Brady suddenly became a statistical giant. We saw him bring in the dynamic cornerback duo of Darrelle Revis and Brandon Browner on the heels of the Seahawks winning with a terrific secondary.

Maybe, just maybe, BB will change his mind on the matter of an outside receiver.

Not helping that cause is, again, the money situation. The Lions will take a whopping $24 million cap hit next year due to Johnson's current contract. As for the money Jeffery will command in free agency, last year's top free agent wide receiver Torrey Smith got a beefy five-year, $40 million contract from the 49ers which included $22 million in guaranteed money. Jeffery is much more highly regarded than Smith around the league and would want to blow those numbers out of the water.

Aries Make the most of your day. Get personal matters in order and tidy up unfinished business. Don't let an emotional incident lead to an avoidable conflict.

Taurus If you look for opportunity, you will find it. It's up to you to make things happen and to speak up if you want something. Share your thoughts and feelings.

Gemini Nothing will stand in your way if you are honest about what you want. A couple of personal changes will help improve an important partnership.

Cancer Don't get caught up in someone else's emotional problems. Put your time and effort into a project that highlights your skills and attributes. Be affectionate and supportive.

Leo Get serious about who you are and who you want to be. You can make positive changes if you recognize what you really want to accomplish. Don't be afraid to go it alone.

Virgo Enjoy spending time with people you don't often get to see. A move in a creative direction will tempt you. Fond memories will prompt you to get in touch with old friends.

Libra Embrace new possibilities instead of walking away from the change they will bring. It's time to let go of whatever isn't working for you so that you can make positive gains.

Scorpio Work alone if it makes more sense to you. The aim is to raise your profile by taking credit for a job well done. For once, put your needs first.

Sagittarius Don't blurt out what you want or how you feel. Diplomacy is encouraged if you want to avoid opposition. Keep your plans simple and practical.

Capricorn Home improvements may cause emotional duress, but in the end they will bring you great joy. A romantic relationship will prosper due to the personal changes you make.

Aquarius You will impress people with your enthusiasm if you concentrate on getting things done, instead of complaining about what remains to be accomplished.

Pisces Visit someone you like or a place that inspires you. Communication and action will bring the results you are looking for. Romance will improve your life. EUGENIA LAST
